

WHY MIGHT CROSS-CULTURAL WORKERS NEED A 2-WEEK RETREAT?

The calling into cross-cultural work is certainly rewarding, but it can also bring many challenges. When faced with these challenges many leaders do not know where to turn for help.

This intensive retreat is led by veteran cross-cultural workers, who are also fully trained in counseling. Using wellness seminars, group counseling, and individual or couples counseling in the context of being in community with other cross-cultural workers is extremely effective.

An intensive program is a very wise and cost-effective step to address relational, psychological, emotional, marital, or trauma issues. Caring for emotional and holistic health is good stewardship of cross-cultural workers' vision, passion, training, cultural acclimation, language-learning and experience.

Overseas support and intervention are effective in healing and restoration and are much less expensive than a return to the home country. Early and adequate intervention is key—and it is cost effective in the long-run!
